

Facebook And Friends

Posted on March 4, 2024 by jamesq

This is a question I answered on a public forum where I am apparently still welcome and for now uncensored. Big Tech firms face serious headwinds. The big one that confronts Facebook, is that people don't use it anymore. Sure, the official numbers show otherwise. There are ways to create official numbers. There is no way to hide reality when reality takes hold. Facebook is dead space. There is a limit to how long it can be presented as otherwise.

For years, I used Facebook. I got off in 2020 because I was so offended by the censorship. At the time of my leaving, there were countless users who posted constantly – some all day long.

A few months ago, I logged into a page I opened using an AKA name created years ago. I have never used it. With that page, I only have four friends.

As an experiment, I searched for Facebook friends who used to post constantly. Most of them are gone. Of those I did find, most have not posted anything in two years. I have continued my experiment.

I have a list of ten names. Each day, I check to see if any of them have posted anything. About every three weeks one will post. Out of ten only two have posted anything yet.

Our betters, one of which is Facebook, want to collectively rule the world and manage everyone's lives. Now their own businesses are starting to fail. How are they going to conquer the world if they lose their wealth and the political power wealth buys them?

Anyone who can read can and will benefit from reading The Fantasy – Free Advantage. There is no math or statistics. There are a few charts – all of which are easy to understand. There are no complex economic principles. There is no political ideology.